Executive summary

01 Task 1

Older Families (Budget) bought the most chips: $168K in sales. Older Singles/Couples are the top life stage ($402K), and Retirees have the most customers. Families spend the most per customer (about $35). Young Singles/Couples spend the least ($18).

02 Task 2

All three trial stores did better than their control stores in Feb–Apr 2019. Store 77 did best (sales +26%, customers +23%). Store 86 had more customers in all three months (+14%). Store 88 gained less (sales +12%). The gain came from more customers, not from customers buying more often.

Trial store performance

quantium

Classification: Confidential

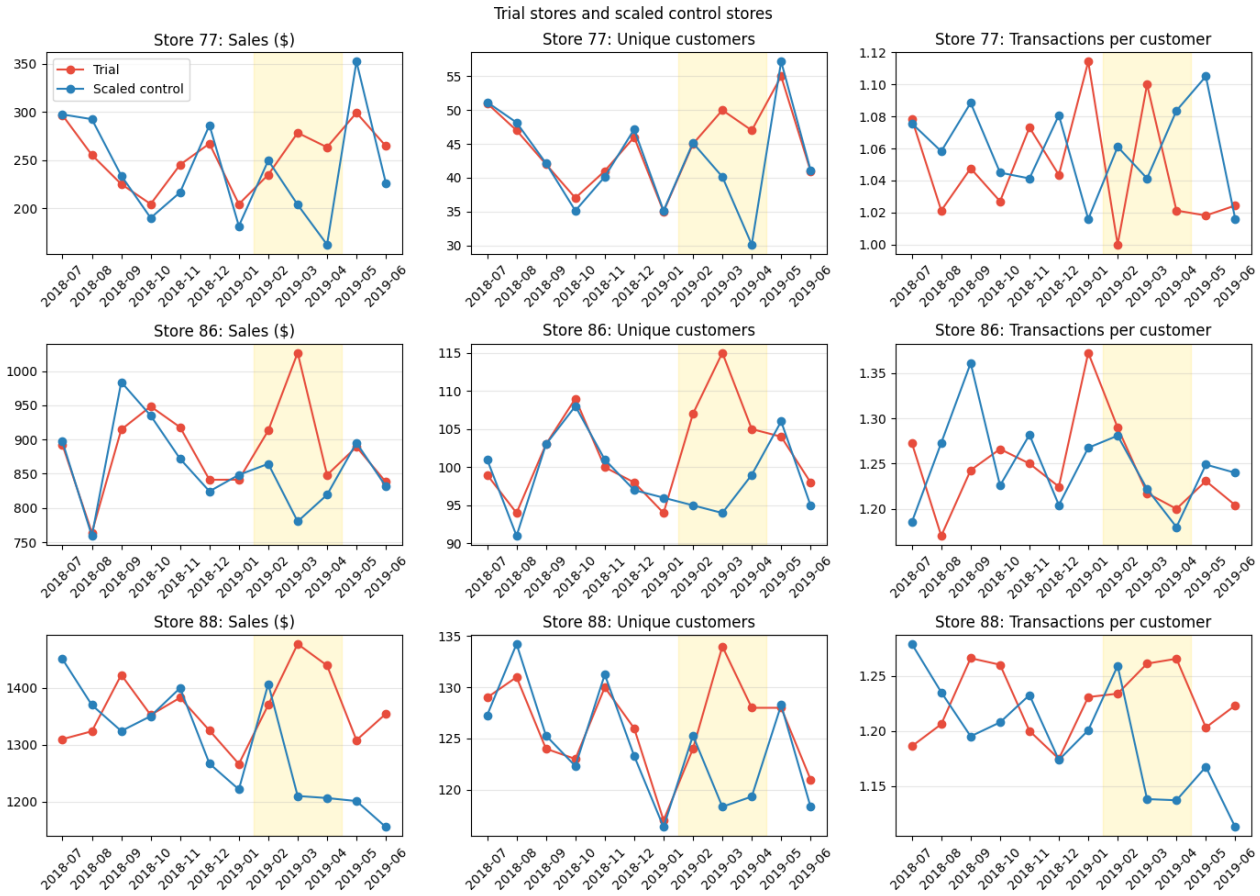

Control store choice : We matched each trial store with a store that behaved in a similar way before the trial (Jul 2018 – Jan 2019).

Trial Store → Control Store

Store 77 → Store 233

Store 86 → Store 155

Store 88 → Store 237

Trial Performance Results :

Store 77 – Best result. Sales +26% and customers +23% vs control. March and April were above the normal range.

Store 86 – More customers. Customers +14%, above the normal range in all 3 months. Sales +13%, above the normal range in March only.

Store 88 – Smaller gain. Sales +12% and customers +6%, above the normal range in March and April, not in February.

Visits per customer (transactions per customer) did not change in any store. Normal range = the green band in the charts (95% range).

Recommendations & Next Steps

Recommendation :

The new layout brought more customers in all three trial stores. We suggest starting with stores like Store 77 (biggest gain) and Store 86 (more customers every month). Store 88 gained less and later, so we should wait for more proof. These results are a good sign, but not final proof, because we only had 7 months of data before the trial.

Next Steps :

- Check Stores 77 and 88 again with a second control store. Control Store 233 had lower sales in Mar–Apr, so Store 77's gain may look bigger than it is
- Look at May–Jun 2019 to see if the gain continues after the trial
- Find other stores like Stores 77 and 86 to start the rollout
